NARRATIVE:

On June 12, 2013, Senior Investigator J. Dubois and I attempted to contact the driver involved in a minor traffic collision with the defendant, Christopher Brown (Brown) on or around June 21, 2013. Contact was made at the front door of the residence with Igor G. who advised his wife, Olga G. (Olga) was not available and she would contact me at a later time. Prior to leaving, I observed a black, 4door Mercedes, C300 which displayed the California license number I observed in an internet video memorializing the incident, parked in the driveway. Based upon the internet video and my prior experience, I formed the opinion the damage would most likely have been to the rear bumper area. I observed minor damage to the bumper and photographed it using a digital camera. I downloaded the photographs onto a compact disk (CD) and booked into the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office (LADA) Sound Lab under number 13-819 CDO.

Later that morning, at approximately 10:30 a.m., I received a telephone call from Olga who advised she would speak with me regarding the events which took place after the traffic collision where Brown rear-ended her vehicle. The interview was digitally recorded, downloaded onto a CD and booked into the LADA Sound Lab under number 13-820 CDO. The following is a summation of said interview.

On June 21, 2013, Olga was stopped at the red light in the number one (1) lane, northbound on Barham Boulevard. Olga was subsequently rear ended by another vehicle (later determined to be driven by Brown). Both vehicles pulled to the side of the street and she made contact with the driver, now known as Brown. Also present was a female passenger, now known as Karrueche Tientrese Tran (Tran). Olga explained to me she was new to this country and had never been involved in a traffic collision. Because of that fact, she had called Igor to ascertain the proper procedure, as required by California law, to handle the minor traffic collision.

During the contact with Brown and Tran, Olga had requested the proper paperwork associated with the responsibilities of a driver who has been involved in a traffic collision in the state of California. Olga presented her information as required by California law, however Brown continued to stall and avoid his responsibility. Tran eventually presented a CDL to Olga and Olga took a picture of it. After reviewing the CDL, Olga determined it did not belong to the male driver but Tran. Olga again asked for Brown's CDL and Tran told her she did not need it. Tran stated further, Olga should just use her CDL because the vehicle belonged to her (Tran) anyway. Olga then stated that she had written a statement for Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) and she would send me the copy.

I received the typed statement referencing the LAPD report number 13-15-11576 from Olga, in an email. Refer to the attached document. I reviewed the document while I continued the interview and determined the defendant Brown had failed to provide the proper information at the scene of a traffic collision required by California Law. Olga stated she never received any information at the time of the accident. However, Olga advised after a couple of days after the incident, a "private detective" made contact with her husband at their residence and provided them with a copy of an expired insurance card along with the name of the driver who was driving the vehicle (Brown) and Attorney information (Mark Geragos). Refer to the attached document. I also received an estimate for the repair cost associated with the damage Olga's vehicle sustained as a result of Brown striking her vehicle on May 21, 2013. Olga provided no further information.

On 5/21/2013 around 12:30 PM I was driving on Barham Blvd. towards Burbank. I stopped on a red light on the intersection with Forest Loan in a left line (not the left-turn line). Being in a full stop for few seconds, I felt a boom. I got rear-ended. I looked in a rear view mirror and saw a big black car. I told it to my husband on a phone and he instructed me to be calm and just exchange the information. In a left mirror and saw a driver getting out of the car that hit me. He was scary looking covered with tattoos. I was shaken since it was my first ever car accident. I opened the window and the guy sad that he is sorry and we should pull over to not to disturb traffic. He was polite. He drove around me on a left and I followed him to the curb on a right just past the intersection. I parked behind him and got out of the car. At this moment he got out of his car and a girl came out of the passenger side. We took pictures of my car and I took a picture of his car from the rear. The girl said to exchange phone numbers, I gave mine but she did not give hers. I asked for DL insurance and registration and she gave me a DL. I snapped a picture of it then I realized it was her DL. I asked for the driver's DL, but the girl got nervous and said that this is her car, so all I need is her DL. Again I asked for the driver's DL, insurance and registration. They got in a car and seem looking for something in different compartments. I did not hear their conversation. Then he let me make a picture of some paper, that later I saw was an expired registration for some Lamborghini, after what I asked for the driver's paperwork again. The girl continued to repeat that this is her car and it doesn't matter who was driving, so her DL is good enough. The guy seemed to getting nervous. I realized that something is wrong and snapped a picture of them just in case. And then they went ballistic: the girl started to scream, "She took a picture", the guy tried to grab camera or me, I jumped back, the girl screamed "Don't touch her, don't touch her". The guy screamed, "You are a bitch! Who do you think you are, bitch? Do you think if you driving Mercedes so got money, bitch? Do you think I am just a black nigger? I got more money than you, beech!" And so on. I was so shocked, that I was speechless. Just a moment ago he was a nice guy. After screaming some insulting nonsense for a while longer, he slammed a door and drove away fast and noisy.

When I got home, I had such a headache and felt so dizzy, that I napped for several hours. I waked up feeling no better. On a phone my mom, a nurse, told me to take a blood pressure. I usually have 90/60. At this time I had 160/90. My husband was at work, I was alone, I was thinking of the accident and the insult over and over again. I have never been insulted so badly. I was on a phone with my mom for hours crying.

When my husband came home, he comforted me and I fall asleep. Next day my blood pressure was my normal, 90/60, but I felt no better. I spend most of the day alone, thinking of what happened. At some pint my friend texted me "What happened?" I asked how did she know, she said "This is on Internet, do you know who he is?" I said "No", then I looked it up and realized who he was. I was expecting that they would call with insurance info since I gave my number and they did not, I didn't want to make any noise about that, I just wanted to get over it and fix my car.

Couple of days past and I realized that no one will call and I went to the police. Another couple of days later private detective came by with insurance info.

My husband will take the car for the estimate tomorrow, since he is busy at work and I will forward the estimate right after.
